AREAS

STREETS OF INTEREST

DOWN CENTER. McKay, Bishop, Crescent, Mountain, Stanley, between Dorchester and Sherbrooke Streets. Heavy concentration of boutiques, pubs, restaurants, coffee houses and droves of people just floating around.

STE.-CATHERINE STREET. Montreal's main retail thoroughfare, with all the major department stores.

CARRE ST.-LOUIS, ST.-DENIS STREET. (Just above Sherbrooke) The centre of Montreal's "village" or Latin Quarter. Prince Arthur Street winds east from the McGill Campus to the park through Village Carré St. Louis.

ST.-DENIS STREET (below Sherbrooke). Very much like the Crescent Street area though with a more distinctly french atmosphere.

ST. LAWRENCE BLVD. Montreal's ethnic area. It is by far the most economical and interesting for marketing and a fascinating environment through which to stroll and window shop.

LOWER ST. LAWRENCE BLVD. "The Main" . . . freaky bars, steamed hot-dogs parlours, porno flics, the tatoo parlours, amusement arcades.

PLACE JACQUES CARTIER. A gathering place for people on warm summer afternoons and evenings, it also has its share of clubs, restaurants and flower stands.

RUE SAINT PAUL. The first street in Old Montreal, it is a narrow cobbled street with lanterns and snug stone buildings, small boutiques and restaurants.

THE CHOCOLATE LAWS BY MILKIE O'HENTRY

A MONOGRAPH ILLUSTRATING THE CHOCOLATE LAWS BY MILKIE O'HENRY

A GENTLE PARODY BY JOHN McCAULEY

A survey of recent monographs on chocolate show that they are nonexistent; in their place one finds advertisement testimonials which are biased come-ons shilling a product.

This nonograph is a compendium of little known papers devoted to the research of chocoloate. It is also a rigorous attempt to bring the empirical method into the world of chocolate subjectivity.

It is hoped that this paper will leave the student of science and chocolate with a knowledge that the human taste receptors are one of the most complex and discriminating - and yet most pleasurable of all functional feedback mechanisms of Man. And above all, that only one flavour can do justice to the human palette - chocolate.

THE CHOCOLATE LAWS

Lowney's Law:

The quantitative relationship between the flavour and mouthful of chocolate was initially described by Lowney. He observed that a mouthful of chocolate was inversely related to its flavour - if the chewing rate was held constant.

i.e. A plot of flavour versus mouthful had the following appearance:

He showed that this could be expressed quantitatively in the form:

Fax 1

M or: FM = CONSTANT

so that if flavour is changed from - the mouthful changes from-

M

to maintain -

M M 1 2 2 1

Fry or Cadbury's Law:

The dependence of the mouthful of chocolate on the chewing rate under conditions where the flavour is held constant was described by Fry and Cadbury.

A plot of the mouthful of chocolate as a function of the chewing rate in degrees of ummmh would look like:

ummmh

The mouthful is increased linearly with the chewing rate, and the relationship could be expressed in the form:

mouthful = M O (1 + chewing rate)

or: mouthful

chewing rate

M = MO + ummh X chewing rate where the constant ummmh which is the slope in the graph is: M O / ummmh if we write: M = MO (ummh + chewing rate) ummmh then it is clear if we define a new chewing rate ummh, then we obtain: M MO but: chewing rate ummmh MO = mouthful at ummh, so that in the more general case:M chewing rate chewing rate

ummmh

THE IDEAL CHOCOLATE LAW

Obviously there is a Combined Chocolate Law know to scientists as: 'The Ideal Chocolate Law'. However, since all chocolates tend toward ideal behaviour, it is unnecessary to elaborate and illustrate it here.

The main thing for any student is practice over theory - so eat!

THE AUTHOR:

Milk ie O'Hentry holds the Chocolate Chair at Oxford University. O'Henry obtained his bachelor's, master's, and doctoral degrees at Oxford in 1933, 1934 and 1936 respectively. He is a member of the Royal Academy of Confection and President of the Swetmettas Society. He is the author of two books: 'The Cacao Papers' & 'Confessions of a Chocolate Junkie'.

DRUG LAWS

There's the law ....

Possession of any drug, and this includes pot and hashish, is an offence punishable by a maximum imprisonment term of seven years.

Possession with intention to traffic is punishable by a maximum of life imprisonment. Trafficing is defined as making, selling, giving, administrating, transporting, delivering, distributing or offering.

The present level of drug use in Montreal is such that the authorities are much more concerned with drug trafficing and pushers (with most of the heat falling on heavy importers). As years go by so does the discussion on changing the harsh laws for simple possession and at the rate the gov't. moves on making a decision we can expect no change in the near future.

THE APOCALYPTIC BUS

"Hi, Remember me?"

I guess I came on too strong, but I was very happy to see her again. I'd been looking for her for so long. "On the bus, remember? Two weeks ago Thursday. The number thirty-seven, around two in the morning." I was sure it was the same girl. The same hard eyes and rigin, nervous, well-proportioned body under that same deceiving soft long light brown hair.

"No, I don't know what you're talking about. You must be thinking about somebody else." She snapped it at me nervously and moved off quickly towards the door of the restaurant. Perhaps she was right, I thought. The girl on the bus was even more scared and lonely looking.

Just the same I couldn't help feeling an ache of rejection in my stomach as I turned back to my coffee. I didn't want to look up because I was sure that all of the restaurant staff was looking at me, condemning me for having used such a cheap ruse to try and pick up a girl in their restaurant. The ache turned into a lump of loneliness, and I imagined her waling quickly down the sidewalk, the cheeks of her ass pinched tightly together for fear that I might follow. I imagined that I could see that same lump of loneliness in her stomach.

Thinking that gave me the courage to look over at the fellow who was wiping the counter. He had one of those white aprons tied around his waist, and a loose, faded blue shirt with the right sleeve rolled carelessly back from the wrist. The cuff slipped down to his hand and he pushed it back to where it had been, as though resigned to the fact that it would only slip down again. His hair was dark, greasy and longish with traces of it growing in a scattered pattern over his cheeks. His skin was pale and a few pimples stood out to protect the sparse hair on his face from the threat of a razor blade. He wiped the counter as though he had just forgotten something important and hadn't realized it yet.

The juke box had just finished playing the third of the three songs I had selected for a quarter, I had already forgotten what they were, and the restaurant was hushed in that dishloth silence peculiar to empty restaurants when the juke box has just stopped playing. I though I could see the same lump of loneliness in the guy wiping the counter and suddenly I was picturing all the people out in the street, each one with this uncomfortable lump of loneliness lodged there in the stomach, all walking around as though they had just forgotten something really important but hadn't realized it yet.

I stirred my coffee and took out a cigarette. I begain thinking about that bus ride of the second Thursday before last.

"Hey, do you know if the number 73 bus runs along Laurier? " I asked the guy wiping the counter. "I think it's the 73 or the 54 or something.

"No," he said, half-pausing in his work.

"No, eh? Well. Thanks anyway," I mumbled. I was ure it was the 73 that had picked me up that night, though it might have been the 37 or the 54.

"The bus up there, it goes down St. Denis to Dorchester," the restaurant guy suddently responded, rolling his cuff back up.

"It does? I didn't know that, You been on it? "

"Sure," he answered, "I go home on it up Parc; it goes all over the place." "Ya but not the same one, though."

"Oh yeah, it's the same one. It goes all over. It goes along St. Joseph sometimes and back towards the metro that way. I been on it."

"Yeah? I didn't know that."

"Yeah," he said and walked off into the kitchen. I drank some of my coffee and looked over to see a couple walk in. They avoided my eyes and looked for a seat over near the back where the telephones are. They looked Italian, mostly by the way they avoided my eyes. Italians have their own way of doing that. He guided her pas the counter where I was sitting and as they passed I felt the lumps of loneliness in their stomachs. I looked back to my coffee and thought about that bus again.

I had just left a friend's place that night, and I was feeling pretty lonely and depressed and things, and it was cold as hell. I kept stamping my feet to keep warm and when it came, and I knew that the bus I usually take along there isn't the 73, but damn, it was cold, and the bus stopped for me, so I got in.

"Will this bus take me to the Metro?, I asked the driver, and he said 'Qui Monsieur'. Well, that was good enough for me. Just the same, something seemed funny. For one thing, I had never had a bus driver call me Monsieur before, and for another thing, the bus was unusually crowded for two a.m. I looked down the aisle and reached for the support bar. I was trying to avoid people's eyes while I scanned through them for a seat. That's when I noticed that they were all looking directly at me. I got really scared.

"Yeah, I know the busses pretty good," said the restaurant guy coming back out of the kitchen. "Just thinkin' of it like that, I don't know any 73 on Laurier, though."

"No, eh? " I answered.

"No," he paused, leaning back against a shelf with his arms crossed. He had decided he was going to talk. "Might go up around Cremazie, not Laurier though. That's the forty-eight." The way he was leaning I had a clear view of the lump in his stomach; it was sending out messages to the one in mine.

"The forty-eight, eh? "

"Yepp. It goes over to the Metro and then comes back along St. Joseph. My uncle lives up there. He used to be a bus driver." He gave me a look of authority, as though he had made an important point and gained the upper hand in an argument. I noticed out of the corner of my eye that the Italian girl was watching us. I looked over at her and she looked away. Her boyfriend was studying the menu. She had wavey black hair that looked like it had recently been done by a hair dresser. Her dark eyes had a tense, nervous quiver in them that was reflected in her face. She wore a soft looking silkish marroon blouse. I thought I could see her breast through the button holes. I thought of spring. Then I remembered the bus again. There was real excitement in the passengers' eyes as they looked at me. No hostility, but it scared me all the same. I wanted to check and see if my fly was undone, but I couldn't figure out how. The people at the back of the bus had gotten up and were waling towards me. Everyone seemed to be getting up. A cute short little girl hugged me and kissed my throat, and then an elderly man embraced me, pushing his right cheek against mine and then his left cheek against my left one. Somewhow it seemed perfectly normal. I was trying to check my back pocket to see if my wallet was still there. A whiskered, sunken cheek old burn with alcohol on his breath tried to embrace me next, but I put my hand firmly on his chest and pushed him back. Behind me I heard strange laughter stop. I hadn't noticed it until it stopped. Some people stopped the old bum from falling over, and he looked at me with hurt, dark eyes. All the people were sitting down again, their eyes avoiding mine, "What the hell's going on here?". I yelled. but they all seemed not to hear me. I turned back to the bus driver. "What's going on here! What's this all about?" I glanced back at the seats, "Pardon Monsieur?" I said, "What's it all about? " But as I spoke I noticed that everyone was sitting down again, exactly where they had been before, all looking at their laps or at some corner of the bus. "I'm afraid I do not understand, Monsieur; would you like me to call you at your stop?"

The bus looked perfectly normal now. Everyone looked paranoid and separate, as nervous of each other as I had felt of the. I began to think that the whole thing had been in my imagination. "Y-Yes, thank you," I said to the driver.

The telephone rang in the restaurant and the Italian guy got up and answered it. At the same time three of those waspy student types walked in, talking about politics. "Yeah, it's a fuckin' rip-off, man, I mean we're just being kept in school to be kept off the labour market." The one who was talking had black longish hair, sideburns and a mustache thin enough to show his age. He was taller than the other two and he wore a working man's overshirt, jeans and cowboy boots. He was spindly with over-sized hands and thin, piano-player fingers. His movements were jerky.

"That suits me. I don't want to work anyways," the second guy laughed nervously. When he said it his lump of loneliness came in to focus and I could suddenly see that all three of them had one. It was like a tension that held them apart and together at the same time. The second guy was short and he had a blond beard that he wore like an amateur actor who had forgotten to take his costume off. His hair was cut shorter than a brush-cut. He wore the same uniform as the jerky tall guy. Their presence jolted the atmosphere of the restaurant making everyone recoil as though the newcomers had crashed in through the front window and were on their way out through the back wall. They collided with a table right behind me, landing noisily on three nervous chairs. The third guy had curly brown hair and brown eyes and a long, pointed brown beard that was wrapped around his left index finger. He didn't look like he was going to talk. He was wearing a grey blanket with a hole in the middle for his head to stick through, and his eyes were focused inwardly as though he were contemplating that important thing that everyone else hadn't realized the'd forgotten. I had the feeling he was sitting in the lotus position behind me ...

"Yeah, but it's just not cool, man. I mean there's no jobs for us now, and even when we get a B.A. there's still not going to be anything for us. I mean, at least we should have the right to choose. In a Marxist state we would be paid to go to university, by the state, and when we finished we'd have a job because the state would be controlling that side of it, too. I mean, right now in America everything's controlled by big business, and big business is designed to make the stock-holders rich at the expense of everyone else. I mean in a Marxist state everything would be organized with everyone's best interest in mind."

The Italian guy hung up the phone and walked over to the juke box. The guy who had been wiping the counter looked afraid to talk now, as though he was afraid he would be overheard, so he went back to wiping the counter. The juke box started to play some off-beat song like that music they pipe into office buildings. It drowned out the converstation so that I would have to strain to hear it. I went back to thinking about the bus.

I had taken a seat near the back of the bus with my back to the side window. I still wasn't sure if I trusted these people. They looked normal enough, now, but I couldn't dismiss what had happened. The old burn I had shoved was sitting almost directly across from me and he looked like a hurt puppy. It seemed silly to me to find myself wondering if these things had really happened. I knew I was tired, yet I couldn't believe my mind was playing such tricks on me. I decided that I would go and see my doctor the next day, but I never did. I was really tense. I just wanted to get to the Metro and get home, get away from these people. These buses were getting me down; I was doubting my sanity. The old burn looked at me for a second too long when our eyes met, and I felt myself baring my teeth, but he looked away again, quickly. I felt the eyese of an old lady from farther up toward the front of the bus. I turned the full force of my stare at her, but I had to look away again. There was a sad sympathy in her eyes. "They're all in this together," I thought, "they're all playing tricks on me". I tried to took out of the far window, but there was too few places to look; even t here I had to avoid the reflections of peoples' eyes. I felt the old drunk staring at me again. "The weak link! I thought. I could get mad at him and they couldn't do anything without showing their hand.

But it was a perfectly normal bus now. It was just that incident I had imagined as I had got on earlier. I might be cracking up, but this wasn't the place to prove it.

Just the s ame I resented the fact that I was too upset to return the drunk's stare. I turned on him and made a motion to get up, as though I were going to slug him. He looked really scared and turned to look out the window. I felt flushed and I felt my underarms begin to sweat. I couldn't see anything except my anger, but I could feel something else, almost right across from me, boring in through my blindness. Before I had settled into my seat again I had acknowledged what it was, and I new that I had to confront it.

It was the little girl who had first embraced me, her eyes reprimanding and innocent. I couldn't confront them; they were too honest: They demanded an answer, an honest one. I looked at her and ally my confusion swelled into my face. I got up, I had to re-act, and grabbed onto the support bar as the bus swayed around a corner: "What the Hell? It's not my fault!" I looked from the girl to the dlar lady to the drunk. I felt like crying into the old man's lap, but just then a ripple of laughter swelled down from the front of the bus, a spontaneous wave that jiggled me inside leaving me laughing in its wake. My own laughter burst up from inside of me and I felt as though I were just a part of it. Warm tears ran down my cheeks and as my eyes cleared I saw that I was not alone, that everyone on the bus was laughing, and suddenly I knew them all, because each person's laughter was his own as I was mine, and that caused me to burst out all over again.

There was something more peculiar this time, though, because as my laughter swelled through me I could beel someone else, very close, through his laughter. It was the bus driver. I could see him out of the corner of my eye, and for just a second I could see that he was dressed in long, white robes, and that he had a flowing white beard and white hair that trailed away from him down the aisle, as though it were blowing in the wind.

It seemed for just that second too that his laughter and mine had become one, and that I was looking out the front window of the bus, at the cold, lonely streets, through his eyes, and I couldn't tell whether we were laughing or crying. I felt a strange fear ride through me, as though I were off-balance on a bicycle.

Back at the restaurant the music stopped and I could hear the three guys behind me again. The blond, short guy was talking animatedly to his friends.

"... And then suddenly this German-looking guy turns to me and says, "My name is Horst Maier; I am a jeweller and a clock repairer." He's got this big friendly smile on his face, like. And then this middle-aged lady says, "And my name is Annette Laflêche; I am a secretary." And somebody else introduced himself and somebody else! It was crazy man.

"And then this big fat broad, she's got make-up all over her face, she gets up and curtsies! Man! Then she says, "My name is Lola Lablanche, I am an actress! And man, suddently this bus driver starts laughing again . . . . " The juke box started playing another song and their conversation was lost to me again. You can imagine how I felt, though. My heart was beating in anticipation. This guy behind me, why he had been on the same bus! That was just how it happened, alright. Everyone began introducing themselves, and the bus driver laughed until the windows rattled. Then the bus stopped, and someone got out and we all wished him good night, and someone else got in and we all ran forward to meet him or her, and some would get a little scared, and others would get really scared.

This one little old lady came up the steps with a cane, wished the bus driver a good evening, put her ticket in the box, and then, when she turned and saw us all her eyes just lit right up and she exclaimed: "Oh, I've been waiting so long for this! My name is Gabrielle Lajoie and I am a grandmother.! "

Everyone was sharing biscuits and cigars and chocolate and stories and there was this feeling of happy conversation in the air, even when no-one was talking.

I bumped the saucer of my coffee cup as I sat there in the restaurant counter recalling all this, and I watched as the ripples echoed in towards the center of the coffee. It felt like the laughter in my stomach were causing the ripples. Just then I noticed that the restaurant guy was watching me a little peculiarly. He came over and filled my coffee cup, then walked into the kitchen with the pot. The juke box stopped again and I could hear the three guys bchind me.

"What was the driver's name, do you remember?" It was the tall guy who asked the question.

"Yeah! " The short guy said, "That was the best part. He turned and said, 'My name is Roch St. Pierre,' and then he laughed that laugh again."

There was silence for a second; the restaurant guy came back out of the kitchen. Then the tall guy said, "Man that is some dream! You should write it down before you forget it."

"Yeah, I guess I should." Answered the short guy. Then the third song began to play on the juke box. The restaurant guy came over to me and said:

"You listening to that story they're telling behind you there? "

"Sort of, Why? I answered.

He turned to leave, then he turned back on me and said: "The guy says its a dream, but it's not. It's not no dream 'cause the same thing happened to me." Then he turned and walked quickly into the kitchen before I had a chance to answer.

Well I sat there for a second, then I decided that it was that it was time to leave the restaurant. On my way out the door I thought about how I had finally gotten off the bus.

It had stopped and someone got up to leave through the back door, and we all said good night, and this girl stepped up in the front and put her ticket in the box. She was about my own age. She turned to look for a seat as the bus began to move again. When she saw us all rushing forward to meet her, she panicked the same way as I had and turned back towards the driver: 'Let me off! Stop the bus! Let me out of here! " We were all so upset that we all quickly assumed our seats, not wishing to have upset here. No-one meant to hurt her, yet I found myself feeling so embarrased, as though we had meant her harm, that I couldn't look at any of the other passengers. The bus stopped again, and she got out.

I was so upset by the fear that I had seen on her face that quickly got up and jumped out the back door. I wanted to tell her that it was alright, that she didn't have to be afraid, but when I got on the street and the bus had left I could see no sign of her. I spent the rest of the night walking the streets looking for her and thinking about the bus, but as the sun began to rise, I gave it up and went home. Still, I keep thinking that I see her in the fear I see in people's faces, and I suppose I will continue to, until I find her.

HITCH-HIKING

INTER-CITY HITCH-HIKING:

HITCH WEST. Route 40. Ottawa, Toronto, Vancouver. Take Metro to Cremazie, then bus 100 along Metropolitan Blvd. to Trans-Canada ramp entrance. Ask busdriver to shout out the stop. Fastest way to city limits. Route 20. Fort Street entrance at Dorchester St., is reasonable for hitching from downtown.

HITCH EAST. Quebec City, Halifax. Metro to Longeuil. Take door for taxis. Walk to 2'o'clock position towards Sorel entrance ramp of Route 3 and 20.

Entrance ramp to Jacques Cartier Bridge from downtown is reasonable but not as direct as using the Metro. HITCH SOUTH. New York, Boston. Take Metro to Longueil and do as hitching East but use Laprairie, USA entrance ramp.

HITCH NORTH. Val Morin, Ste-Agathe, Mont Tremblant Park. Take Metro to Henri-Bourassa, then transfer to bus 69 to the Laurentides Autoroute ramp. Also bus 100 West from Cremazie to Laurentien Blvd, get off bus at the Continental Can of Canada Building.

INTRA-CITY HITCH-HIKING

HITCH EAST-WEST. Route 2, Sherbrooke Street is reasonable hiking.

HITCH NORTH-SOUTH. Côte des Neiges (Guy), at the corner of de Maisonneuve Blvd. or Sherbrooke St., and for the east side of the mountain—Park Avenue, St-Laurent or St-Denis Streets.

HITCH SOUTH SHORE. The best bet is to use the entrance ramps of Victoria or Jacques Cartier Bridges. The hitching locations listed under INTER-CITY are the easiest and fastest ways out of the city, but if you haven't the bread for the Metro, then follow the INTRA-CITY routes out. HITCH SOUTH crossing into the USA. It's not easy getting into the land of the free these days. The world's longest continuous un-defended border has been closed especially to hitchhikers. If you're going that way use bus or train to cross or have the driver of the car mention nothing of your hiking and that you are both going to the same location. Use any border crossing but the Champlain checkpoint, Route 15 Canada, 87-USA. It's big, new and dozens of customs men do nothing but check Montrealers. Those who own cars seem to have lost most of their joie de vivre to picking up hikers. In two years, hiking has become disgustingly poor in the downtown areas even if there is a bus strike. It seems that the motto is-man is the king of the car, one man to 14 miles per gallon, pollute, kill, mangle and consume more space than is humanly tolerable.

Rides are announced on radio CHOM 97.7. (935-8591) and check personal column of the classified section in the daily papers.

PLACE JACQUES CARTIER. This cobbled square is et across from the fountains of the city hall buildings in Old Montreal. There are many clubs and shops of all varieties in the vicinity. It is located between Notre Dame East and rue de la Commune, Trans: metro to Champ-de-Mars or bus 55 south from St. Urbain.

BOTANICAL GARDENS at PARC MAISONNEUVE. 4101 Sherbrooke East. This is one of the world's top three botanical gardens with 192 acres of rolling parkland and specialised greenhouses. It is open from 9 AM to sunset all year 'round. Trans: bus 24 on Sherbrooke east or bus 185 from Frontenac metro. PARC LAFONTAINE. This goodsized park contains two small lakes, a children's Garden of Wonders (872-2815), park concerts and recreational facilities. There is canoeing on the lakes. Located at Sherbrooke East and rue Park La-Fontaine. Trans: bus 24, Sherbrooke East.

PARC ILE STE-HELENE. A beautiful island park surrounded by the St. Lawrence River and Man and His World. It has facilities for picnics and swimming. The Montreal Military Muscum, two old forts and a watertower can be visited there. Trans: metro to Ile Ste-Hélène.

ESTMOUNT PARK. A park of lowers, playgrounds, water fountains and rolling grassy hills. The atmos tmosphere is rather British, even a loral clock is thrown in for genuine ffect. Bus 24 Sherbrooke St.West a Strathcona.

UMMIT PARK. Bird, flower and the sanctuary. In getting there you take the Park exit on Côte des Neiges and make a 180<sup>o</sup> turn; then take the first right (Belvedere) up to Summit Firele and park at the lookout.

CTORIA SQUARE in Egglish, QUARE VICTORIA in Québecoischichever or what ever, it's an ugly deserted affair at the bottom of reaver Hall Hill at the corner of Craig. If anyone has a spare tree please plant in this barren space.

PARC MONT ROYAL. Situated at the top of good old volcanic Mont Royal, this park if 5,000 acres of woods and rolling grassy fields floats 763 feet above the city. There are picnic areas, a sculpture garden, a lake and loads of room just to freak in. The cheapest way to scale the mountain is to climb it. There are steps at the foot of Peel & Ontario Streets at Pine Avenue and a small gravel road which starts behind the Cartier monument on Park Ave on the east slope of the mountain which is the most natural. Trans: walk up Peel St. or take bus 11 from Mount Royal metro or Côte des Neiges bus.

ANGRIGNON PARK. This is a large natural park in the southwest of the city with fishing, picnic and boating facilities. It has two lakes, each over a mile in length. There is a childrens' zoo open in winter from noon to 5 PM, Sat. & Sun. Admission: adults -50c; children -25cTrans: bus 78 from Atwater metro.

NOTRE DAME PARK. A product of Expo '67, it is the best example of Montreal's most dynamic man-made achievement: hillrop meadows with waist-high oat field; the rocky coasts of Labrador, quiet marsh lands with a frog or two; waterways and islands like the Thousand Islands; sandy coves and sca gulls; thousands of migrating birds. Trees and evergreens shield areas of shade and loneliness. Montreal's monument to nature. Before you set out on this hot summer day with your tent, fishing line, lunch and a number or two ... this 100 acre park of Canadian foliage and topography is now a testing area for caterpillar tractors and bulldozers. The park does not exist - it's just another Olympian first. It is now a monument to Montreal.

WATERFALL

Spring a winging bus up mountain and water falls down in boots I hiked my coat a habit in fortress snow still cloaked we lurch travelling up the mountain

but three French Jews

laught in Yiddish a waterfall on Guy St!

this keeps me here when I fondle tomorrow bus against my warmth yet ride the formed route there is truth if I could move my adult routes pleasant yet as though beseiged I have my two arms they wrap me round

I saw the water fall in Greece, I rode by in clearsky summerday.

I lay at the beach collected rocks, blue, pink, gray.

I passed by Sinai where water fell

72

I passed by Sinai so many years ago.

I've seen the sights my habit eyes still wear. they see, but oh my city, I've patrolled the ever green half time buried

- Carol H. Leckner

NONE OF THE ABOVE

There are glorious symbols for what we are, for what we've done. Churches and God and circuses, the ferris wheel, the fun house, libraries, statues, the morgue. And there is glory in our action, in our war and laughter, in our construction, in our thought and art, in our death.

But we have removed simplicity and now to touch another must recall all of these. No! your hand is none of these. Your hand is nothing but your world and my hand mine. And when they touch there is one world. Isn't love simple.

- Grant Judd

The semi-nude sexpot and the magnetic headlines are two of the vital components of the tabloid press. A tabloid is a weekly periodical which deals in a sensationalized way with a limited set of subjects. Sex and gore being the main variables. The "family tabloid" such as Midnight or the National Enquirer is mainly concerned with scandal stories about the rich and famous, rags to riches tales, miracle cures and consumer protection. Sunkist golden hair, brown eyes, fully-female shape, has been hurt by love in past, wants loyal man.

Steve Sky, a present member of the Dawson Faculty and ex-employee of the Midnight conglomerate, gave a lecture on how the pornography vehicle functions. Thursday last at the Vanier auditorium. A moustached chap with a sincerely warm smile he discussed both the pathetic and ironic sides of the operation. As the handful of participants discovered there are some facts about the tabloid press which are impressive. Like the size. Canadian-owned Midnight has a circulation figure of over 600,000. The other 4 nationally distributed tabloids range from 30,000 to 300.000. A typical scene in an average tabloid editorial office as a harried editor, browbeats a staffer. He invented only 98 stories that day falling far under the usual quota. Hinton grabbed her by the hair and slapped her around until she was moaning and bleeding from cuts on her face and neck. Then he picked her up, threw her on the bed, ripped off her clothing and raped her. Gerry grabbed her by the throat and squeezed...until Maureen stopped struggling and collapsed on the car seat. He stripped her naked and after pawing her body, raped her ... Grandma, 64, grows new set of teeth. How we will soon breath water like fish.

STREET SLEEPING

STREET SLEEPING. If you're out in the cold, no room, and haven't found a friend to stay with. The night is warm and those cups of coffee are losing out to sleep here are a few suggestions for resting in relative comfort. Try the lawns surrounding St. Patrick's Church at the corner of Dorchester and Beaver Hall Hill. Public baths not far away in Central Station University and Belmont entrance, one block away.

St. James Church on the corner of City Councillers and Ste Catherine O. -asmall tree and shaded lawn just to the rear of the church.

For a spacious, private monastery lawn to crash on, walk west on Sherbrooke past Guy and before Atwater, enter the second gate in the great, gray wall, turn left, walk a bit and voila ... a wilderness!

Mont Royal Park and Ste Hélène's Island are both large parks with many shady groves to hide away at night. Both have public baths. Mont Royal's are at Beaver Lake, the Lookout, and at the corner of Park Ave. and Duluth. Ste Hélène's Island's baths are at the swimming pool Centre.

On the north side of the small park in front of Place des Arts just behind a hedge of trees is a reasonable place for sleeping.

TAXIS

Taxis are fairly inexpensive in Montreal & fairly easy to find on the street. Tips of 15 per cent are expected. If you are someplace where you can't find a taxi cruising the following phone numbers will get one.

DIAMOND - (842-3221) VETERAN'S - (866-4551) LASALLE - (861-2552) WESTMOUNT - (935-2468) MONTREAL WEST - (484-8018)

Around downtown most riders will be under $1.50, about $2.00 to the north side of the Mountain, Côte des Neige area.

Taxis for handicapped people are also available in the Greater Montreal area. Mini Bus Forest, 7620 du Mail (353-6901); Medicar Service, 2930 Gover (733-7969)
